The Post Blueprint

How to Structure a Post People Follow to the End

Every line should earn the next one

SOFIA KAKKAVA

You have the idea.
But it goes nowhere

Most people write content the way they think.
They start somewhere. Jump to another point.
Loop back. End with nothing.

The reader follows for 2 seconds. Then they're gone.
Not because the content was bad.
Because there was no clear path to follow.

The difference is not talent
It's structure

Here's what changes when your post has a clear path to follow.

The content is the same but the structure is what changes everything.

WITHOUT STRUCTURE

- Reader gets lost
- Point goes nowhere
- No clear takeaway
- They scroll past

WITH STRUCTURE

- Reader knows where they are
- Each line earns the next
- Clear takeaway at the end
- They save it. Share it. Remember it.

Every strong post has 4 parts

In this order. Every time.
Every line should earn the next one.

01 THE HOOK

Start with a strong hook
the first line that stops the scroll

02 THE CONTEXT

Show them you understand the situation.

Make them feel seen before you teach them anything.

2-3 lines maximum.

03 THE VALUE

This is what they came for.

One clear point

Not three.
Not a list of tips.

One thing, fully explained.

04 THE CTA

Ask a question.
Give a direction.
Create a conversation.

Never more than 2 lines.

See how the 4 parts work together

Business Coach example → follow the structure from hook to CTA.

01 THE HOOK

You're booking 20 calls a week. But still not closing.

02 THE CONTEXT

Most coaches assume it's a pricing problem. Or a confidence problem. It's usually neither of those.

03 THE VALUE

The real break point is almost always the same: You're selling the solution before they believe they have the problem.

Fix that sequence and the close rate changes immediately.

04 THE CTA

What does your discovery call look like right now?

Drop it below.

BLUEPRINT EXAMPLES: SAMPLE PERSONAS

Same structure.
Five different niches.

BUSINESS COACH

HOOK
You're booking 20 calls a week.
But still not closing.

CONTEXT
Most coaches assume it's pricing or confidence.

VALUE
You're selling the solution before they believe they have the problem.

CTA
What does your discovery call look like right now?

FITNESS PRO

HOOK
Youtrain 4 times a week. Same body after a month.

CONTEXT
Most people assume they need to train harder.

VALUE
Your body changes during recovery not during training

CTA
What does your recovery actually look like?

ONLINE EDUCATOR

HOOK
50 enrolled. Less than 20 reached halfway.

CONTEXT
Most creators respond by adding more content.

VALUE
Completion improves with less friction not more content..

CTA
Where do your students usually drop off?

HR CONSULTANT

HOOK
You've replaced the same role 3 times. Same result.

CONTEXT
Most companies assume they're hiring the wrong person.

VALUE
The role was set up to fail before they started.

CTA
What does your onboarding for senior hires look like?

HEALTH COACH

HOOK
You know exactly what to do.
And yet.

CONTEXT
Most people don't have an information problem.

VALUE
Change the environment. Make the right choice the easy choice.

CTA
What's the one habit that keeps breaking for you?

Run through this before every post

- Does the first line stop the scroll?
  Hook — real situation, no answer revealed
- Does the context make them feel seen?
  Expand the hook, show you understand
- Is there one clear insight?
  Value — not 3 tips. One thing, fully explained
- Does the CTA invite not push?
  One question or one direction. Never more than 2 lines
- Does every line earn the next?
  Read it out loud. If you'd skip a line? Cut it

What breaks the structure

SKIPPING THE CONTEXT

Jumping from hook straight to value. The reader isn't ready yet. They need to feel seen first.

TOO MANY POINTS IN THE VALUE SECTION

"Here are 5 tips..." The reader gets overwhelmed. One clear insight lands harder than five scattered ones.

WEAK CTA

"Let me know what you think."

Too vague. Ask a specific question or give a specific next step.

BURYING THE HOOK

Starting with
"I've been thinking about..."

The hook must be the very first line. Not the third.

WRITING FOR YOURSELF

Explaining what you know instead of what they need to understand.

The value section is for them.

Two prompts. Every post covered.

PROMPT 1 : BUILD THE FULL POST

Use when: you have a hook and need the full post

My hook is: [PASTE YOUR HOOK FROM DAY 11]

Write a post using this 4-part structure:

Part 1 — Hook: use my hook above

Part 2 — Context: 2-3 lines that expand on the hook. Make the reader feel understood. Do not give the answer yet.

Part 3 — Value: one clear insight. Not a list. One thing, fully explained in 3-5 lines.

Part 4 — CTA: one specific question. Keep it under 2 lines.

Short, direct, conversational. Sound like a real person — not a brand."

SAMPLE:
"My hook is: You train 4 times a week. Same body after a month. Write a post using the 4-part blueprint. Short, direct, conversational."

PROMPT 2 : DIAGNOSE YOUR POST

Use when: you have a draft and want to improve it

Here is my post: [PASTE YOUR POST] Review it using this 4-part blueprint:

Part 1 — Hook: does it stop the scroll?

Is the situation specific enough?

Part 2 — Context: does it make the reader feel seen before teaching?

Part 3 — Value: is there one clear insight?

Or too many points?

Part 4 — CTA: is it specific enough to get a response?

Tell me what is working and what to fix.

Be direct."

SAMPLE:
"Here is my post: [paste draft]. Review it using the 4-part blueprint. Tell me what is working and what to fix. Be direct."

YOUR DAILY WORKFLOW

One post. One point. One clear path.

1. Start with your hook
   From Day 11: the one that stops the scroll.
2. Write the context
   2-3 lines. Make them feel seen. Don't teach yet.
3. Write the value
   One insight. Fully explained. Not a list.
4. Write the CTA
   One specific question. Keep it under 2 lines.
5. Run the checklist
   Does every line earn the next? If you'd skip it cut it.
6. Post it
   Don't overthink. The next post will be better than this one.

Structure is not a cage. It's a path.
